Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Thursday 07 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Overnight rain and snow clearing then sunshine and wintry showers.

Today:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow across southern and eastern Scotland slowly clearing through the morning. Brighter conditions across northern and northwestern parts spreading south but increasingly wintry showers expected in north. Freshening northerly winds.

Tonight:
Clear spells and snow showers this evening and overnight, most frequent and heaviest in the north and east. Western and central parts largely dry with a widespread frost. Ice likely.

Friday:
Sunny spells and snow, and coastal rain, showers across the north and east slowly dying out. Elsewhere largely dry and sunny. Cold but northerly winds easing.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Milder with cloud and occasionally heavy rain, especially in the north and west, although Shetland at risk of some snow. Best of any brighter conditions in east through the weekend.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.